ASYLUM SEEKERS

■ Eurotunnel takes a stand against the asylum invasion

Eurotunnel has launched a legal bid to close the French Red Cross warehouse from where thousands of asylum seekers make attempts to enter Britain illegally. The company wants the Sangatte building near Calais, which holds around 1,275 asylum seekers to close because it faces fines of up to £2000 for each asylum seeker caught getting into Britain through the tunnel. Eurotunnel already catches as many as 400 people every night at the Coquelles terminal, but around 800 per month are still getting through. The company has spent around £3 million on razor wire, employed more than 100 guards and installed CCTV cameras and other security equipment but has had little effect on the numbers of asylum seekers flooding into Britain. The Sangatte centre exists solely to provide food and shelter to economic migrants who then proceed to attempt to enter Britain illegally. The company wants to regain control of the building, which it owns. Eurotunnel claims the French state hasn't done enough to ensure the security of the French terminal. This security, Eurotunnel claims, has been compromised by the creation, just two kilometres away, of a refuge containing large numbers of asylum seekers whose sole intention is to reach the UK and who trespass onto the terminal in ever increasing numbers. This would cost the company millions of pounds each year and it has stated it is not prepared to pay. Eurotunnel has taken all reasonable measures to prevent would-be refugees from using the tunnel to gain entry to Britain. As we have seen, this is a burden no single company can and should be expected to carry alone. The Government has a duty to patrol and secure the nation's borders, and shouldn't pass the buck to an organisation with limited authority and resources. ■

POLITICAL CORRECTNESS

■ Vicars "nationalistic" Jerusalem!

A politically correct vicar has banned bride Victoria Williams from having her two favourite hymns sung at her wedding because they are "too nationalistic"! The trainee bank manager was shocked when she was told that 'Jerusalem', and 'I Vow To Three My Country' were unsuitable. The Reverend Donald Allister simply ruled: "Sorry, you can't have those, they're too nationalistic"! Now Victoria and fiancé Stuart Turton have been forced to switch their ceremony to another church. Victoria, 26, expected to exchange vows with 27-year-old Stuart next month at

Cheadle Parish Church in Stockport, Greater Manchester, until the vicar ruled that, in particular, Jerusalem signified that "England was best" which he claimed was "not appropriate". The 49 year-old vicar defended the decision. He said: "It is our choice what hymns are sung in church. It is true to say that in a sense Jerusalem is nationalistic because it is saying that England is best. We all want to be patriotic, but in a proper way and this hymn is just not appropriate". As BNP members already know, after major events it is now BNP tradition to sing Jerusalem to end the proceedings. Jerusalem is an inspiring Christian hymn that is part of our heritage in this island. ■

NORTHERN IRELAND

■ 'Real' IRA attacks Britain

The 'Real' IRA exploded a bomb in the heart of one of London's busiest suburbs with pubs, clubs and restaurants packed with young people last month. Police had 27 minutes to locate and deal with the bomb with scant information. The bomb exploded 20 seconds after midnight. Shop and pub windows were shattered. The estimated cost of the attack runs into millions of pounds. This is just one among a series of bomb attacks against the British people perpetrated by the 'Real' IRA in recent months. The headquarters of the BBC (British Broadcasting Corporation) has been targeted and narrowly escaped a blast. The recent terrorist outbursts come amid a breakdown of the political process in Northern Ireland that has deteriorated into deadlock and stalemate. Several years after the so-called "Good Friday Agreement", the IRA has yet to decommission a single bullet, fogging off weak and gullible British politicians and journalists with verbal garbage like promising to put the weapons "behind all possible use." Yet while still under possession of the IRA the weapons can still be used at any time they are needed. ■

TORY LEADERSHIP

■ Duncan Smith surrenders to political correctness

A storm erupted last month in the Tory leadership election that started with the disgraceful expulsion from the Conservative Party of Edgar Griffin, after 53 years of loyal campaigning and membership, over his alleged "links" with the BNP. The farce demonstrates all too clearly the extent to which the modern Conservative Party leadership is willing to appease the forces of political correctness. The only links Mr. Edgar Griffin has with the BNP is that his wife Jean is the BNP's Enquiries' Secretary, is a fully paid up member and a BNP candidate at the last election (standing against Iain Duncan Smith no less!), and that his son, Nick Griffin, is the present Chairman of the British National Party. Edgar has at no point been a member of the BNP. We in the BNP find this latest media-hyped muddle astonishing as it all too clearly demonstrates how the modern Conservative Party is prepared to surrender to the anti free-speech forces of political correctness that at many times it has claimed to loath. The BNP itself has received a large amount of publicity over the affair including a large 'comparison' of BNP and Tory policies in the Guardian. Edgar himself must be commemorated for defending the BNP in the face of media condemnation. Edgar is planning to appeal against his expulsion. ■

ZIMBABWE

■ Mugabe continues reign of terror!

Robert Mugabe, President of Zimbabwe is planning to expel all white farmers from that country before next year's elections it has been revealed as the country sinks into anarchy. A secret document, entitled Give up and Leave, that was circulated in July, states that farmers are to be systematically harassed and mentally tortured and their farms destabilised until they give in and give up. This happening just before the recent round of killings and farm invasions by black racists in Chinoyi, Doma and Hwedza in which many farmers were evicted off their land. Mr Mugabe has been behind a Stalinist campaign recently to silence the press and opposition groups by means of infiltration and state terror including the drawing up of hit-lists of critics to be killed. Prime Minister Blair won't lift a single finger to help the white British citizens of Zimbabwe who are being persecuted because of the colour of their skin by a black racist government. ■

The mass media: enemy within the gates!

As correctly described in A New Way Forward, a BNP mini-manifesto from the mid-90s, the mass media today is little better than an enemy fifth column in the heart of the nation, wielding enormous and unchallenged power over the public agenda and opinions, and invariably promoting doctrines and lifestyles celebrating degeneracy and immorality.

No party in Britain today is a victim of the ruthless and unchecked power of the mass media more than the British National Party! It would seem that there are two BNPs in Britain today: the first exists in the real world, and is a party of ordinary patriotic Britons, struggling to preserve the British way of life and a fair deal for the British people; the second BNP resides in the warped minds of the journalists who infest the rotten media edifice - a party of hatred, thugs, extremists and unintelligent morons.

Victim of falsehood

The BNP is one of the most lied about parties in British history! Why does the BNP attract such lies from those whose job it should be to uphold the truth? The mass media of Britain today exercises more power than the government itself, but the owners and controllers of the mass media are entirely unelected and for the most part unknown and unseen. Would any responsible government tolerate such a powerful and fundamentally undemocratic public opinion forming apparatus, especially as it is used almost exclusively for anti-British purposes?

The media is given free rein in today's society to lie, smear and besmirch any forces that oppose its grip on the channels of public information. This means almost exclusively in today's political climate that, while all the other parties are part and parcel of the same intricately woven anti-British establishment, the BNP is targeted as the real alternative to this fraud and thus treated as a threat - a threat to the power and profits of the media barons.

Truth and public decency

As the BNP is the only party that pledges to ensure that Britain's vastly powerful mass media industry is brought down to earth under certain guidelines - the guidelines of truth and public decency - we can expect the venomous treatment we receive but don't deserve. It is important for all our members, supporters and sympathisers to understand that as the liberals' multiracial society breaks down in the years to come, the media will be used as a cannon, aimed at anyone offering something better to put in its place.

● Nick Griffin exposes New Labour's fascist agenda

BLAIR'S CORPORATE STATE

In popular imagination, fascism has several key features. Principally, the creation of a totalitarian state where ordinary people forfeit their democratic rights in exchange for rule by a - hopefully - enlightened elite, and the protection of that state by extensive machinery of propaganda distribution, surveillance, intimidation and repression. Anyone who had been with me over the last few months, particularly during my extensive dealings with the BBC and assorted police forces in northern England and Scotland, would have seen the extent to which Blair's Britain can justly be described as 'fascist.'

Yet, it could be argued, such totalitarianism could just as well be described as Communist. After all, the fanatical devotion to the multiracial 'experiment' which characterises the entire Establishment reflects the Marxist youth of many Labour and media big-wigs. Right the way across Western Europe, the institutions of power are riddled with men and women who cut their political teeth as students in various leftist organisations in the mayhem that peaked in 1968.

Corporate state

But there is another crucial ingredient to classic fascism - the creation of a corporate state, a system in which key industries are organised into co-ordinated blocks which, although generally remaining under private ownership, are controlled and directed by the state. While very few political observers have yet noticed - or dared to comment on - the trend, such a system is well on its way to completion in modern Britain. There is only really one difference between the economic organisation of Mussolini's Italy and Blair's Britain: Under the open dictatorship of the Roman strongman,

Margaret Thatcher, the women who started the corporate take-over of Britain the state controlled the corporations, while under the slimy hands of Blair and his gaggle of lawyers and union bureaucrats, the corporations control the state.

One of the intrepid few who have not only witnessed the trend but also spoken out against it is the principled left-wing journalist, George Monbiot. His book on the subject, Captive State - the corporate takeover of Britain, was published last year and well deserves Noam Chomsky's praise as "a major contribution to the understanding of the regime that is being imposed by state-corporate power."

Subservience to finance

Captive State charts the way in which the corporate power which was unleashed under Margaret Thatcher has gone on to bribe and bully its way to even greater dominance under New Labour. It shows how the well-rewarded subservience of Tory Ministers such as John Gummer to lobbying groups such as the Construction Industry Board was duplicated by Labour incomers such as John Prescott and Nick Raynsford. Jack Straw, likewise, took just one week after becoming Home Secretary in the incoming New Labour regime in 1997 to ditch his opposition to privately financed prisons and start signing contracts for private jails.

Monbiot details scandal after scandal, and broken Labour promise after broken Labour promise.

He illustrates his thesis with a wide range of examples: the Skye Toll Bridge ('owned' by the private Bank of America after public funds contributed £26 million towards its £25 million construction cost); 'privately funded' hospital developments in places such as Coventry and Swindon (where the NHS has

BLAIR'S FASCISM...

● Under the open dictatorship of Benito Mussolini, the state controlled the corporations, while under the slimy hands of Blair and his gaggle of Islington lawyers and union bureaucrats, the corporations control the state. The BNP rejects both types of Fascism.

had to give to the private corporations involved subsidies which would have paid for the renovation and upgrading of their entire hospital stock had they been allowed to organise the work themselves); road schemes such as the Birmingham Northern Relief Road (where surveys showing that the environmentally disastrous development would actually make congestion worse were shelved rather than being allowed to stop a development that will make a fortune for the construction companies), and the way in which the supermarkets have quite literally bought the Labour party's backing for the out-of-town developments that have sucked the life out of town centres and their smaller retail rivals.

Government infiltrated

Monbiot also takes a hard look at the fat cats who both prosper from the corporate takeover and encourage it further. Men such as Lord Sainsbury, chairman of the supermarket chain which was referred to the Competition

Commission for alleged anti-competitive practices, who is now nevertheless Minister in the Department of Trade and Industry, the body to which the Competition Commission reports.

He exposes too lesser known figures such as John Bowman, a director of Commercial Union, which was named and shamed by the Treasury for 7,900 mis-sold pensions, but who is on the board of the Occupational Pensions authority, which is supposed to protect pensioners from exploitation.

Or Prof Nigel Poole, a key manager in Zeneca Plant Science, which has had six applications for trials of genetically modified crops approved by the government's Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment - of which he just happens to be a member.

Time and time again in his meticulously referenced book, Monbiot follows the threads of exploitation and graft back to the Private Finance Initiative (PFI). This started life under the last

Tory government, and is supposed to be the way in which private funds are raised to help finance essentially public projects, such as the NHS, schools and transport infrastructure. Monbiot sums up what it's really all about with devastating clarity: "Among the many costs of the Private Finance Initiative is the transfer of control and ownership of the nation's critical infrastructure to private business, whose interests are often wholly distinct from those of the electorate."

"Complicated and confidential, it has been able to penetrate areas of public life whose overt privatisation would be politically impossible. It has enabled companies to harness the great untapped resources they coveted, sustaining their share prices by turning public capital into private cash. The purpose of the Private Finance Initiative is to deliver the assets of the state to the corporations."

Bitterly opposed to PFI while in opposition, the Labour government is now in the process of extending it into areas of the economy that the Conservatives never even dreamt of.

This is partly a reflection of the way in which New Labour has bought into old Tory privatisation dogma, and partly of the fact that, under World Trade Organisation rules and the World Bank's GATS (General Agreement on Trade in Services), governments are being forced to hand over responsibility for social protection and national infrastructure to the private sector.

Council housing

Perhaps the biggest PFI scandal of all is now enveloping Britain's council housing stock. All over the country, local authorities are handing their entire housing stocks - and every single one of their unfortunate tenants - over to profit-hungry private corporations.

The idea of the transfer is being 'sold' to local communities in various guises, and even presented as a 'choice' in many cases: "You can stay as you are but we won't have any money for even basic repairs, or you can agree to the new housing partnership taking over and straight away there'll be millions of pounds available for improvements."

It's an offer no one is likely to refuse, especially as there is no mechanism by which the tenants can oppose the handover anyway. But make no mistake, the cash being made available to pay for the improvements is taxpayers' money in any case, and it is being handed over to private corporations as a sweetener to make it worth their while taking on the 'burden' of having a captive market paying rising rents to them for ever and ever, Amen.

Misunderstanding

The wording used to describe the new housing companies is designed to make the unwary believe that they are some sort of community association, but the reality is that they are run by massively overpaid executives, and are designed to bring in 'market forces' to council housing and make massive profits prior to full privatisation in a few years' time.

In areas where the changeover has already taken place, 'efficient' housing associations are already failing to house local youngsters or throwing out the elderly in order to make room for asylum seekers, whose rents are paid by the taxpayer.

Housing newcomers is more profitable than looking after our own people, so out they go! That's the logic of New Labour's corporate capitalism.

Early patriotic socialists campaigned against the exploitation inherent in the infamous 'company town', where one big employer provided not just the jobs but also the housing and shops.

Well, we're headed for the far greater evil of the 'company country', where a handful of giant corporations control not just the low paid jobs market but the transport system that gets you to work, the shops where you spend your wages, your house, the health service you use if you fall sick, your children's school, and the law enforcement system that protects you from the rampant crime which is inevitable when a huge section of the population is excluded from having a stake in society.

Scheming

The whole process is accelerating. Indeed, it is being deliberately accelerated. The Government response to the farming crisis is fundamentally about forcing independent family farms out of business in order to concentrate land ownership and food production in the hands of capitalist corporations. Economists call it 'vertical integration', but behind the fancy title the reality is that three or four supermarkets (including generous donors to Labour party coffers) are scheming to dominate not just retailing but also the processing, transport and even production of our food.

Out go the independent farmers, hauliers, jam makers and shopkeepers. In come minimum wages for the masses - and maximum profits for the few, especially once we have lost the choice that still forces them to keep prices down.

The corporation state is no longer a distant nightmare, it's becoming the grim reality of Blair's Britain. It cannot be fought by voting Conservative or Lib-Dem, because those parties are just as much part of the System as New Labour.

It cannot be fought by appealing for international working class solidarity, not only because such a thing can never exist, but because internationalism is a key part of the problem, not of the solution. There is only one choice - globalist corporatism or nationalism, slavery or freedom. There is no 'third way'.

Nationalism or Globalism

We will either have a nationalist government that recognises the duty of government to protect those things that have no direct economic value - the poor, the sick, the environment, our heritage, our identity and the patrimony of generations yet unborn - or we will become the wage slaves of the new privatised fascism of the global elite, Chesterton's 'New Unhappy Lords'. George Monbiot, and the other shipwrecked survivors of the old, idealistic left, are absolutely right when they point to the corporate takeover as the iceberg which shattered their hopes of a better future.

The sooner they realise that a radical, democratic nationalism is the only possible lifeboat, the sooner a British National Party government will be able to start picking up the survivors.

RED-WHITE-AND-BLUE

And it rained, and it rained, and it rained. All over the RWB - and we still had a fantastic weekend! The second Red-White-and-Blue festival took place in mid-Wales on the weekend of 11th - 12th August amid some of the worst summer weather seen in the area for years. Strong gusts of wind proved too much for the ten mini-marquees allocated for regional displays, while torrential rain forced the cancellation of outdoor events such as the Tug-O-War, football competition and archery display. But inside the packed main marquees, the atmosphere was often electric. More than 500 members and supporters attended, with an estimated additional 100 turned away at roadblocks manned by police officers brought in from Merseyside who refused to stick to the arrangements worked out between the event organisers and the local police. This very marked increase over last year's attendance reflects both the substantial growth the BNP has enjoyed over the last twelve months and the way in which the Red-White-and-Blue has already become the key event in the party calendar. The big increase in the number of families attending was also very welcome and a good sign for the future.

Saturday in the main marquee

● On Saturday afternoon attendees assembled in the main marquee for the evening entertainment. The tiered seating was packed as Chairman Nick Griffin explained that, as the weekend would once again end with the singing of 'Jerusalem', it was fitting that it would start with the singing by two young girls of the Welsh language anthem Mae Hen Wlad Fy'n Nhadau (Land of My Fathers) and the political rally would be chaired by the BNP's Scottish Deputy Chairman Scott McLean. The enthusiastic meeting featured speakers from all over the British Isles, including new Young BNP leader Mark Collett, Burnley organiser Steve Smith, Bexley organiser James Seadon, Bolton organiser Ian Hague, new Ulster organiser Andy McLorie, Scotland activist Steve Blake, Rhys Williams from Swansea and many, many more. The evening's entertainment started with hundreds of people enjoying a hog roast with full salad accompaniment, provided by a local butcher. First on stage was North East activist Trevor Hughes who organised a short costumed presentation of a Northumbrian folk legend, the tale of Pollard. This was followed by everything from nursery rhymes to a gripping recitation of the Gododdin - the earliest surviving British poem, which recounts the events of a doomed expedition by a Celtic war band against a huge Saxon army at Catterick. The evening's music was just as varied, with a session on the piano by Dr. Phill Edwards and two appearances by Meg from Caerphilly who sang various modern ballads and was followed by Glasgow's pro-BNP band Nemesis. Then there was a surprise appearance by none other than Nick Griffin, with a version of the Ralph McTell classic Streets of London, complete with two brand new and very Politically Incorrect verses. Also singing 'from the floor' was a new lady member from the Black Country getting the entire audience singing along to Tipperary. A packed audience of nearly 500 people created a warm and positively electric atmosphere, especially during the evening's main event, a brilliant set by Stigger. With the children packed off to bed, Chris Telford showed the crowd why he's enjoyed some success as a stand-up comedian in his native North East. And his set was followed by a string of contributions from the floor, with jokers from across the country drawing roars of laughter from the audience.

Sunday in the main marquee

● The main Sunday event drew another full house. There were several more well received speeches, and a fascinating presentation of the hidden history of white slavery by members of the Young

● Young BNP members give a presentation on the forgotten saga of White Slavery

BNP. Then, to a huge roar of applause, BNP Chairman Nick Griffin stepped through a screen of dry ice smoke and took the stage for his keynote speech. This examined the key areas of progress made over the previous year, and looked ahead to the work needed to win council seats in the neglected working class areas that have been abandoned by Blair & Co. Mr. Griffin recounted examples of how BNP activists going into such areas now find themselves welcomed "like liberators." He concluded by explaining how the events and media coverage of the last few months have created a huge groundswell of potential support for the BNP, which makes securing council election victories and organising new members and groups our top priority. "British National Party? It's about time!"

JE 2001 A SUCCESS!

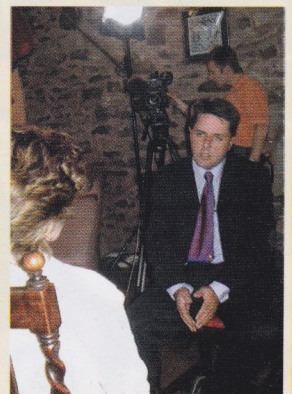

Outstanding regional presentations

● Perhaps the biggest and most successful addition to the first RWB was the presence of so many regional stalls. These were pioneered last year by Scots down from Dundee - who were back with an even better display this time - and the idea was taken up this year by activists from Ulster, Wales, the South West, London, the East Midlands, the North West, Yorkshire and the North East. The regional stalls featured everything from traditional local delicacies - such as scrumpy and cheddar cheese from the South West, or black pudding and 'black bullet' sweets from Lancashire - to displays of regional history and BNP activities. A tremendous amount of careful thought and hard work went into these displays, which really gave visitors a chance to get a flavour of the regional differences and traditions that make up such an important part of our all-too-often neglected heritage.

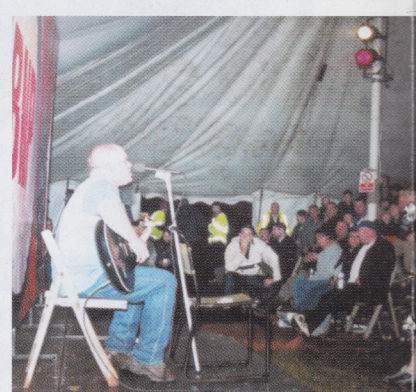

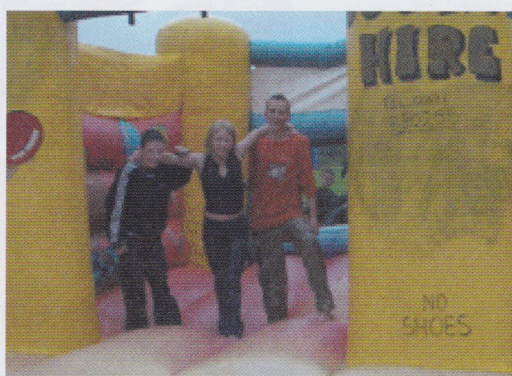

Media Coverage

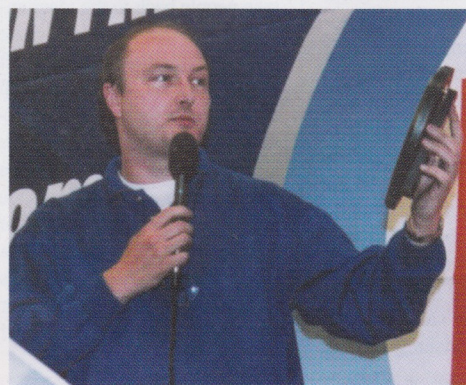

● RWB 2001 attracted a huge amount of media interest. BBC Radio Four and Five both had reporters there, and each put out very fair pieces in which a number of ordinary members handled themselves superbly and came over as a real credit to the party. HTV news also featured the event, and showed their viewers the huge contrast between the scruffy far-left rabble scuffling with the police twenty miles away on the Saturday morning, and the enthusiastic but impeccably behaved BNP crowd at the family event. No fewer than four other TV crews also covered the closing event, including the emotionally charged finale. Pictures of decorated cakes, children and a local organiser in a joke Viking helmet set the tone for a big feature in the Observer, which grudgingly acknowledged that the British National Party is now a family party rather than the street gang of media mythology. No less than an estimated 30 journalists attended and documented the event and most of the coverage to date has been fair.

GIVE THE MALCONTENTS THE COLD SHOULDER!

Much has recently been said in nationalist circles about the issue of homosexuality, and in particular the party's policy on this issue. So where do we stand on this subject? Well, we recognise that homosexuality is wrong. We reject totally the recent trend in the media to portray it as a "valid lifestyle choice", morally equivalent to normal sexuality and to the rearing of families. Accordingly, while the other parties were campaigning to abolish Clause 28, with its restriction on the promotion of homosexuality in schools, the British National Party called for Clause 28 to be strengthened and extended. We believe that the promotion of homosexuality should be banned not just in schools, but also in the mass media. And we believe that young boys should be protected from the attentions of predatory older perverts by returning the age of consent for homosexual sex to 21.

Public displays and promotion of homosexuality will be banned under a BNP government.

This does not mean that we want to persecute individual homosexuals, most of whom cannot help the way they were born, but neither are we willing to grant them the 'right' to flaunt their deviancy and to try to win new recruits to their sad, disease-ridden lifestyle. Along with millions of decent British people just like us, we don't want to hurt anyone, but we do believe that the time has come to push the vocal and aggressive 'Gay' lobby back into their closet and bolt the door.

MALCONTENTS

A tiny group of people, including the leaders of tiny 'rival' groups like what remains of the 'National Front' (or 'National Farce'), and individuals who have demonstrated almost criminal irresponsibility and immaturity in the past by - among other things - dressing up in Nazi uniforms and a few who, despite claiming to support the BNP, last year helped and gave credibility to takeover bid by right-wing Tories trying to gain control of the BNP who then went on after their plan had been foiled to launch their new party intended to replace the BNP, a still-born venture now in the gutter where it belongs. People like these have tried in recent months to portray the BNP's commonsense position as some kind of 'sell-out'.

They want instead to see a total ban on homosexuality, under which it would be a criminal offence. This might sound feasible in principle, but just think about what this would entail. The only way to enforce such a law would be to spy on suspects with secret CCTV cameras or deploy unfortunate policemen at the end of their beds!

As much as the BNP wants to drive homosexuality back into the closet where it belongs, such a policy is wholly unworkable and totally ridiculous.

YEARS OF FAILURE

Worse still, it betrays a totalitarian mindset which is badly at odds with the essentially individualistic and live-and-let-live attitude of most Britons. No wonder these fanatics have a record of forty years of political failure behind them. No wonder they got the British nationalist movement labelled 'fascist.' Would you want to live in a society run by weirdos who want the right to peer through a window into your bedroom? The recent whinging, however, are designed to force the BNP's leaders to reply in turn to the fuss and thus put the malcontents in the spotlight, giving them credibility they don't deserve.

SNIPING

The BNP hasn't dropped its firm opposition to homosexuality in all its manifestations, as it is now accused of. This isn't "taking the Tory road" of "compromise and surrender". How convenient those meaningless terms are to those who have resigned our cause to the gutter for forty years and wouldn't want us to consider a change of direction!

But, of course, these people aren't interested in political success any more than in morality. Their only real reason even for mentioning the BNP's shift to a realistic policy on this issue is the hope of using it as a stick with which to beat the party leadership. We saw the same thing last year when this ragbag of 'hard-liners' rushed to lend support to a vicious attempted coup by unprincipled right-wing Tories trying to gain control of the BNP.

BELITTLING SUCCESS

The truth is that there exist several small cliques of has-beens who have spent the last two years sniping and trying to belittle every success and victory won by the hard work of our activists and the ability of our leadership. They just can't accept that a party not run by them can be making such progress, despite the fact that, having ditched their brand of immature 'macho' politics, that progress is plain for all to see. Everyone 'in the know' understands that the hot air on this issue is coming from those who successfully led British Nationalism down a blind alley for forty precious years and who now cannot accept that the party is flourishing without them. Anyone within the party who felt that the old 'hard man' approach was still the way forward had the chance to stand for the leadership of this highly democratic party back in June.

Under our constitution they will have the same opportunity next June. In the meantime, they have a clear duty to put their shoulders to the same wheel as the overwhelming majority of the officials and activists, whose efforts over the last two years have contributed so much to the progress we are now making. And as for the extremist cranks outside the party, we don't mind what they do as long as they keep well away from us and our areas.

BNP = FAMILY VALUES

If anyone is in doubt as to the British National Party's commitment to family values, just flip over the pages of this issue of Identity and examine the various pictures of this year's RWB. Actions speak far louder than words. Which is more convincing - pompous and unworkable pledges to legislate against the sex drive of a small minority of misfits who, properly pushed back into the closet would harm no one except themselves, or the pictures taken at an event attended by a record number of our families and children?

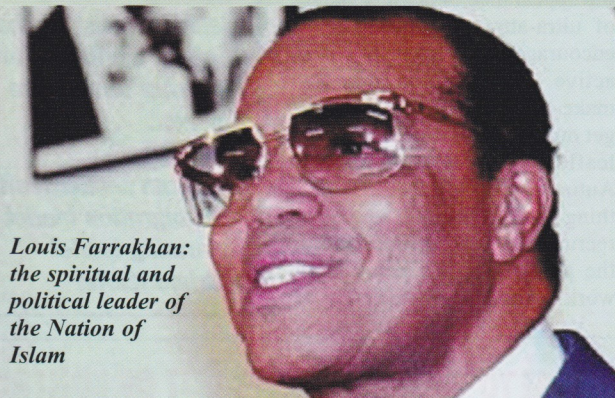

We have precious little time left in which to help the BNP take full advantage of the present opportunities. We really can't afford to have even a small number of people sitting on the sidelines and moaning. But fewer and fewer people are fooled by their claims to be motivated by 'principle' rather than naked self-interest.

We've been very patient with the purveyors of gloom and extremism, but they're drinking in the Last Chance saloon now. I suggest that rather than wasting large amounts of time and effort attempting to hinder the BNP and take people back to the ideological Stone Age, they utilise the precious little time we have left in helping the BNP take full advantage of the present opportunities rather than sitting on the sidelines and sulking. We hope for the party's sake that this is the last time we have to waste space for articles such as this. It is a choice that lies with them. It's time they stopped looking for trouble and to put the Cause first!

● Identity writer Lee Barnes asks an important question:

FARRAKHAN: FRIEND OR FOE?

The High Court in London has overturned the fifteen-year ban on the Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan from entering Great Britain. For decades the white liberal 'elite' conspired to deny an important black community leader access to the 'African Diaspora' living in Great Britain. Blacks residing in this country, and of course members of the Nation of Islam itself, were denied the opportunity to hear for themselves the message of Louis Farrakhan. But that has now all changed. In this article I will try to give a non-biased 'warts and all' account of the life of this man, and the ideology of the Nation of Islam, of which he is the political and spiritual leader. Parts of this article may offend some people, but it is important that we understand the nature of the man and his organisation.

Louis Farrakhan: the spiritual and political leader of the Nation of Islam

His message, that only a black community can cater for the needs of black people, is a message that more and more blacks are taking notice of. Farrakhan also echoes Lee Jasper's recent remarks on 'segregated education' for blacks and whites.

His message of personal responsibility, especially for black men, and black communal self-sufficiency has a wide appeal among urban black Americans, Muslims or not. He has been accused of appealing to black racism and anti-Semitism, and numerous inflammatory remarks are attributed to him - including expressions of admiration for Adolf Hitler. Mr Farrakhan is also an outspoken critic of US foreign policy and advocates American reconciliation with states such as Libya, Iraq and Cuba.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY

He was born Louis Eugene Wolcott in New York in 1933. He trained to be teacher, and worked as a nightclub singer in the early 1950s. In 1955 Malcolm X, a minister for the Nation of Islam, convinced Wolcott to join the organisation. Like many black American Muslims, Wolcott dropped his last name and became known as Minister Louis X. The dropping of a person's family name was seen as a rejection of names imposed on black Americans when they were slaves.

He later adopted the name Abdul Haleem Farrakhan and came to be known as Louis Farrakhan. In 1963, a split developed between Malcolm X and Elijah Muhammad, the leader of the Nation of Islam. Mr Farrakhan sided with Elijah Muhammad, and in the late 1970s emerged to lead the organisation at time when it was becoming more mainstream.

In October 1995, Farrakhan organised the "Million Man March" to Washington DC. During the celebrations that concluded the march, hundreds of thousands of black men vowed to renew their commitments to family, community, and personal responsibility.

Though less than a million men participated in the march, it was widely regarded as having shown the strength of Mr Farrakhan's power base and brought him closer to the political mainstream.

In January 1996, Farrakhan made a 20-nation "world friendship tour" that took in Iran, Libya, and Iraq - all states the US regards as rogue nations and sponsors of international terrorism.

Mr Farrakhan underwent surgery to treat prostate cancer last year. He resumed public appearances early in 2001.

THE IDEOLOGY

The Nation of Islam itself is based on the teachings of an Afro-American ex-convict who taught that he had been abducted by a UFO and met the prophet Mohammed in Heaven who told the Honorable Elijah Mohammed that he was the new prophet of Islam.

He also taught that whites were the result of a genetic experiment that went wrong in ancient Africa, when an insane black scientist created a mutant race of 'white devils'. He also said that blacks were Sun People and that whites were Ice People - and that the white race had to be destroyed before the black race could take over the world!

The Nation of Islam's rhetoric is not only reserved for whites, as they believe that Jews are a 'bloodsucking' race of 'parasites' that have exploited Blacks through the Slave Trade, the movie industry and music industry.

They believe that whites should pay reparations to blacks for the Slave Trade, that America should be split up into seven racial states where the races can self evolve and that the black community should voluntarily separate itself from the multicultural model currently imposed upon its black citizens by 'white exploiters'.

THE ORGANISATION

The Nation of Islam in Britain has about one thousand members, these being concentrated in large black communities in London and Manchester. They were notorious for their violent clashes with police officers at the Stephen Lawrence Inquiry fiasco.

The visit of Farrakhan has torn apart the cosy little consensus that existed between the white middle class liberals and the black activists in black communities of Britain.

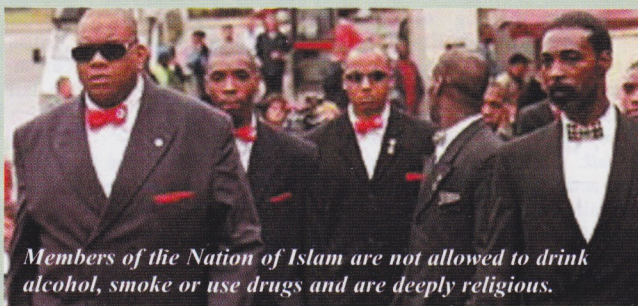

Farrakhan and the Nation of Islam want to help the black community elevate itself from the gutter of drugs and crime that blights many black communities. Farrakhan would impose a militaristic-theocratic-social model on the black community in Britain, including segregation and separate development.

DOUBLE-STANDARDS

Though the Bolshevik bloodhounds of the 'Anti-Nazi League' (or Anti-Normal League) are, according to their own claims, vehemently opposed to any form of 'racism', it would seem that Farrakhan cannot be classified as 'racist' in the eyes of ANL - as he is black!

As we all know in the idiotic ideology of the liberal elite muppets and morons, only whites are capable of 'racism'. For this sort of rubbish the liberal elite and the political parasites and gangsters of 'New' Labour hand out millions of pounds in taxpayers money in subsidies for research and more multicultural propaganda.

The visit of Farrakhan will further polarize the black community and damage the myth of multiculturalism. The overturn of the ban on Farrakhan, however, must be seen as a triumph of free speech, and a triumph over the politically correct liberals, who feel that 'freedom of speech' should be extended to only those who they agree with.

Members of the Nation of Islam are not allowed to drink alcohol, smoke or use drugs and are deeply religious.

NEW LEAFLET RANGE FINALLY LAUNCHED

Although announced in the March issue of Identity, the decision was then taken, in view of the general election fast approaching, to hold back the launch of the BNP's range of reworked new national leaflets till after the election had passed. They are now printed and in stock, and are a testament to the growing professionalism of the BNP.

Post code: _____ Age if under 24: _____ Donation (if any): _____

I want to find out more about the British National Party and its campaign to keep Britain British. I am interested in receiving my own envelope information pack, including samples of the BNP's policy, full colour magazine, leaflets and newspaper Freedom (shown on right). I enclose £1 towards costs and postage.

I would like to join the British National Party for senior, I enclose my £25 (£10 for GPs, students and the unemployed).

File by British National Party, PO Box 287, Waltham Cross, Herts EN8 8ZU - Tel: 01905 965 267
Web: www.bnp.org.uk E-mail: mail@bnp.org.uk

Although branches that will be having a go at winning council seats next year should be concentrating on localised leaflets and specialised campaigns, branches who are not should be getting these leaflets out by the thousand. The enquiry box on the reverse side of the leaflets features small pictures of the front covers of our newspaper Freedom and our magazine Identity, illustrating the key items that enquirers will get in their information packs, to give more incentive to them to write in.

Public sympathy

With public sympathy and interest in the British National Party and its policies growing day by day, there's no doubt that the appearance of a wider range of ultra-attractive leaflets will encourage party organisers and active sympathisers alike to make the extra effort needed to get out even larger quantities of leaflets over this coming Autumn and Winter - something that is bound to boost recruitment and help to build the party everywhere the hard work is put in.

WHAT IS AVAILABLE NOW!

Below is a list of the leaflets available for ordering now, more will follow...

- Asylum seeker leaflet
- Crime leaflet

IMMIGRATION?

OPEN YOUR EYES!

According to Britain's leading population experts, the native British people will be a minority in this country in just a few short decades thanks to hundreds of thousands of immigrants and 'asylum seekers' pouring into Britain every year on ships, cars, planes and lorries. Brits will soon be in the minority in several large UK towns and cities, such as Leicester and London, and nationwide by professional predictions in around 2050.

minors? The British National Party says NO! The British National Party will halt further immigration and 'asylum seeking', and introduce a system of voluntary resettlement whereby immigrants resident in Britain will be encouraged, but not forced, to return to their lands of native origin. Should they choose to return home, the government should provide all the necessary funds, and should be provided the full protection of the law. The British people were never given the chance to vote on whether they wanted Britain to become a 'multicultural' society. It was forced on us by the politicians against the clear wishes of the people. It's not about being against immigrants as individuals, it's about securing our people a homeland that we have lived in for thousands of years. All peoples need a homeland. The British too need a homeland. Yet very soon we will lose ours, because we cannot bring ourselves to say 'no' to immigration. The BNP is the only party in Britain that will stop immigration and put our people first!

Our people have become second class citizens at best! And all this when ethnic minorities account for around 10% of the population!

Is this the future you want? Is this the future you want for your children and grand children? A future where our people will be treated as second class citizens? A future where the British people will be in the

ASYLUM SEEKERS? TIME TO PUT OUR OWN PEOPLE FIRST!

Above: Kurdish 'asylum seekers' pour off a freighter into France. Once there, EU rules make it easy for them to join the flood of immigrants and bogus 'asylum seekers' pouring into Britain. It's not a question of race, it's a question of space!

Every year, hundreds of thousands of so-called 'asylum seekers' come to Britain and are immediately given free homes and full benefits - paid for by British taxpayers. This at a time when our schools are short of teachers and our hospitals are short of beds, and while our pensioners are forced to scrimp and save.

The United Nations states that those forced to flee persecution to claim asylum should seek refuge in the first peaceful country they come to. The sheer fact that 'asylum seekers' travel across half the world, through many peaceful countries, shows that they are coming to Britain looking to take advantage of the UK's lax welfare system. Because of the huge influx of 'asylum seekers', hospital waiting lists are now growing. 'Asylum seekers' are put to the front of the housing queue, before local British people. Up to five million new homes are being constructed on Green Belt land to make more room for population growth. According to Britain's leading population experts, in just 60 years the native British people will be a minority in this land, thanks to mass immigration and asylum seeking. Yet did the politicians ever ask the people if they wanted this? NO! It was forced on us, and if we don't pluck up the courage to say NO to asylum seeking and immigration very soon, our children and grandchildren won't have a future in this land!

CRIME IS OUT OF CONTROL!

CRIME IN BRITAIN IS OUT OF CONTROL! Every time we switch on our TV or pick up a newspaper, we hear endless reports about murders, rapes, burglaries, stolen cars and muggings. Britain used to be a peaceful country where crime was rare, where old ladies and children could walk the streets at night, without fear of mugging or rape. People could leave their doors unlocked without fear of burglary. Whatever happened?

Nowadays pensioners are mugged in their homes, young children are abducted in parks, and our homes, cars and property are at risk every day from the criminal. Our young people roam the streets, abandoned by the system to a life of crime and degeneracy. What has been done about the crime explosion? Nothing! The courts and the judges are too soft, the politicians would rather help the criminal, and penalise the victim, and the police now have their hands tied firmly behind their backs. Society seems powerless against the criminal. What is going wrong? Believe it or not, it all starts with your vote! To put it bluntly, if you vote Lib-Lab-Con, you vote for crime and anarchy on your streets! It's as simple as that! The police have to be allowed to do their job, without interference from politically correct Lib-Lab-Con politicians, and the judges and the courts have got to apply stricter sentences. The British National Party is the party of law and order - the only party in Britain that will stand up to the criminal and protect the public. By voting Lib-Lab-Con, you vote for crime. By voting BNP you vote for a crackdown on crime. Simple choice!

A ROUND UP OF THE MONTH'S PARTY NEWS

■ Around 25 attended the first post-election meeting of the party's Lewisham & Bromley branch last month to hear Chairman Nick Griffin, who earlier in the day took on the BBC heavyweight Tim Sebastian on HardTalk. Opened and chaired by branch activist Chris Roberts, first to speak was local organiser Richard Brook, who gave a round up of activities and a report on the desperate situation now engulfing British education. After a short break and a collection, Chairman Nick Griffin gave a speech on the growing danger posed to the British people by Islamic extremism, explained to a large extent in last month's Identity.

■ North East BNP have been stepping up their activities recently under the careful stewardship of regional organiser Kevin Scott. A campaign to save an area of open space and wetland that is threatened by big business and their Labour lackeys saw over 2000 leaflets distributed with the aim of establishing the green credentials of the BNP. A day of action was held in Hartlepool on the theme "If you want an asylum seeker for a neighbour - vote Labour!", protesting at the large number of asylum seekers being placed in the area. The North East is a major growth area for the BNP. More in due course.

■ The ever-expanding Black Country Branch held its bi-monthly on Monday the 20th of August. Some 40 people attended the meeting including Regional Organiser Simon Darby, and FAIR 'Agony Aunt' Donna Griffiths, and was chaired by local organiser John Salvage. The night was two guest speakers, the first of whom was Mark Collett, new Young BNP leader, and second was new member Mr Hugh Mackay. Mark Collett spoke about the disastrous results of liberal left wing teaching that was complemented by Hugh Mackay's speech about political correctness during his experience at University. Other donations, purchase of calling cards, cash donations, and the sale of party literature resulted in a total of £160.

SEPTEMBER 29-30th 2001

CAMP EXCALIBUR 2001

● Camp Excalibur is the first of the Young BNP's new youth camps. All party members and supporters, from the ages of 14 to 25 are entitled to attend. Camp Excalibur is all but politics free, apart from a closing meeting addressed by Young BNP Chairman Mark Collett and National Chairman Nick Griffin. Items on the agenda include paintballing, archery, football, quiz, swimming, hiking and other outdoor pursuits, campfire singing, refreshments and much, much more! Camp Excalibur is not just a male event! There is plenty to do for young women as well, and several girls are helping to organise the weekend. Don't miss the Young BNP event of the year!

Check out the YBNP's new website:

If you are between the ages of 14 and 25 and are interested in attending this year's Camp Excalibur, please ring 07968 179735 and book your place, or send a letter to PO Box 14, Welshpool, Powys, SY21 OWE or e-mail ybnp@bnp.to

OCTOBER 13th 2001

ANNUAL COLLEGE 2001

"Building a modern and well run BNP!"

Due to bad weather forcing the cancellation of the range of seminars that were due to be held at this year's RWB, the party's leadership has decided that these educational and training workshops are of such paramount importance in light of the fact that the council elections are fast approaching, that a separate event will take place on the 13th of October which will include an expanded range of educational presentations.

This one day party education event will be for organisers and key activists only, and will include vital skills ranging from designing local leaflets, fund-raising, political marketing, cyber-activism to electioneering and community politics.

This event is not optional. Organisers and party officials are obliged to attend and if participation is not possible a very credible reason must be presented. The party is now serious about getting its act together - and is prepared to offer the necessary training in order to build a modern and well run BNP!

NOTEPAD

● More up-to-date news analysis articles are needed for publication in Identity. Keep all articles to around 650-700 words, make them topical and give them substance, not a stream of sloganeering, and send to PO Box 28, Erith, DA8 2ZN.

● All organisers, treasurers and secretaries please note that the official logo of the BNP has now changed to the Union Jack inside the letters BNP design (located on the masthead on the front page of Identity). This should be used on all party material including bulletins, letters, leaflets etc.

"BUILDING BLOCKS" FUND

WATCH OUT - MEDIA LIARS ABOUT!

After three months in which various BNP spokesmen have run rings around the left-liberal media, making monkeys out of an assortment of top interviewers, it was inevitable that the Establishment would hit back with new smears intended to frighten away the huge numbers of ordinary people now watching the party's progress with growing interest and admiration.

Recent race riots: 100% Muslim, but the BNP gets the blame!

As we go to press, we hear of a big forthcoming media campaign to link the BNP in general, and Oldham election candidates Nick Griffin and Mick Treacy in particular, with the state-founded racist gang Combat 18 and members of the Oldham football 'firm', the Fine Young Casuals.

We've been waiting for this smear since before the general election. During the Oldham campaign, a big group of BNP activists, including the two candidates, were working a white estate when one of the locals received a call on his mobile. We were told that young whites in Hollins Road were being victimised by large numbers of riot police, and we were asked to help.

Calming things down

Nick Griffin, Mick Treacy and other members drove over to see what was going on for themselves and to make a protest about police heavy-handedness if necessary. As soon as they arrived, outside the Britannia Pub, the BNP group found themselves under intense police video and photographic surveillance. This continued while they talked with a large number of angry young whites about the repeated stop-and-search tactics of the police.

It now appears that some of those involved are associated with football hooliganism, but there was no mention of this at the time. It seemed to be yet another case of the police double standards so common in northern England this summer, where young whites endure police harassment just for walking down the road, while Muslim thugs are allowed to carry out racist attacks and riot with impunity. In any case, we did our best to calm things down, quashing in particular a mad-cap proposal to "steam the police."

Most of the lads involved were locals, but there were also some from further afield, including several Combat 18 members from London. Two of these in particular made a big point of approaching Nick Griffin, with the police camera across the road zooming in on them all the time. We have to wonder whether similar photo opportunities have been set up at other times as well - no doubt we'll find out!

Extremists

Far from being the "riot planning meeting" which we hear is about to be splashed all over the media, however, this was actually a tense, hostile encounter. One of the C18 goons wanted attack Mr. Griffin, while another made repeated threats against the BNP Chairman on account of his past criticism of Combat 18 as a state-sponsored 'pseudo-gang' designed to discredit the nationalist cause.

After a few minutes of argument - in which Nick Griffin and Mick Treacy told the extremists that peaceful electioneering would do far more for the Cause than confrontations that would allow the media to cast white people as thugs and 'haters' - the BNP team decided that there was no purpose holding up the election campaign any longer talking to idiots and returned to their cars. At the same time the C18 types and a number of the locals who had been with them moved off up the road, closely followed by police riot vans. Later that day clashes between small groups of whites and large gangs of aggressive young Muslims sparked serious disorder.

Media to blame!

It looks as if we now face a big campaign to blame the trouble on a "sinister BNP plot." If so, the media responsible will be guilty not just of a groundless smear, but also of stoking up future riots. For such well-publicised fantasies make it even easier for rumours about non-existent 'racist marches' to sweep through Asian areas, leading to huge numbers of angry youngsters taking to the streets and looking for trouble.

It's alright for the journalists, who don't have to live in the areas they destabilise with their left-wing lies, but for ordinary people - of all colours and creeds - the extra tensions caused by such anti-BNP propaganda can all too easily lead to broken windows and broken bones, or worse. Responsible reporting has never been more important - or less likely.

• A series on the invention of the printing press HOW THE CHANGE

There are two names that brought about a major technological revolution in the 15th century that changed European society forever. Johann Gutenberg is credited with being the inventor of the first movable type printing press around 1456 and William Caxton was the first English printer to use and develop that technology.

Before this invention words and pictures had to be committed laboriously onto parchment (dried sheepskin) and vellum (dried calf hide). Scholars, usually employed within monasteries, copied document after document. Consequently the dissemination of texts and ideas was slow and cumbersome. Only a highly educated few had access to written materials which were usually so valuable that libraries in monasteries and the early universities chained their texts to the walls.

Invention

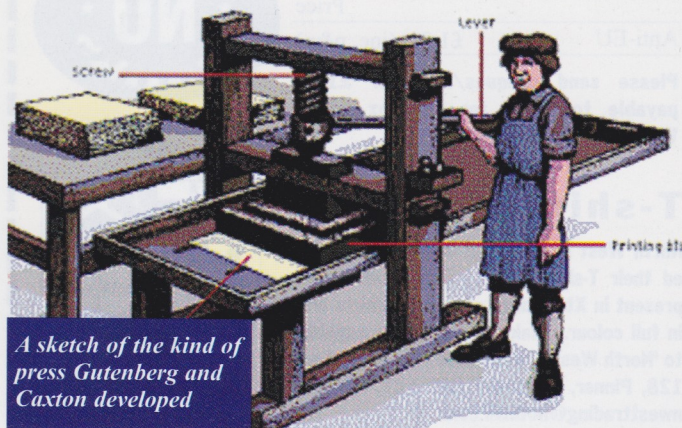

Gutenberg was born around 1400 in Mainz, Germany and was a goldsmith by trade. It was his necessity to repay huge debts that in the early 1450s led to his invention of a metal mould for individual letters of the alphabet, which were then filled with an alloy of lead and tin. The letters he made were all the same size and could be aligned easily in a wooden framework to create words and sentences.

He modified a wine press to create a means of mass-producing identical texts. Initially he produced "indulgences", a kind of punishment imposed by the church similar to "lines" issued to wayward school pupils down to this day! Gutenberg's first complete text was a copy of the Bible. He produced 200 copies over a period of two years and 50 still survive.

In 1476 Caxton, a scholar and merchant from Kent, returned from a visit to Europe where he

entive genius of Western Man by Stephen McDonald

THE WRITTEN WORD AND EUROPEAN SOCIETY

A sketch of the kind of press Gutenberg and Caxton developed saw Gutenberg's press in action. He set about constructing his own printing press in Westminster and together with his foreign language skills completed the translation of a popular French novel, The Recuyell of the Histories of Troye. (History of Troy). This was the very first book to be printed in the English language. Over the course of 14 years, he printed more than 70 books, including such works as Troilus and Creseide, Morte d'Arthur, The History of Reynart the Foxe, and The Canterbury Tales.

By the time Caxton died in 1491 there were several dozen printing presses operating in England.

The invention of the movable type printing press was to have profound implications for the development of British and European society.

Not only did standards for written English evolve, which aided communication between different parts of the country, but texts could be produced in a fraction of the time and at a fraction of the cost.

Renaissance

A Renaissance of literature, scientific discoveries and technological changes began with the widespread dissemination of ideas. The British and European populations became more literate and ideas committed to text could be distributed more easily.

The scientific principle of "repeatability" the verification of experimental results and natural observations gave rise to challenges to established Church dogma. Scholars in different parts of Europe could begin to make associations between seemingly unrelated ideas. It is no surprise that the world shattering scientific discoveries by Copernicus, Kepler and later Galileo depended upon written observations.

Major change

Apart from the major scientific changes, the structure of society was also to change. Prior to the 1500s society was feudal; one's status was largely determined at birth.

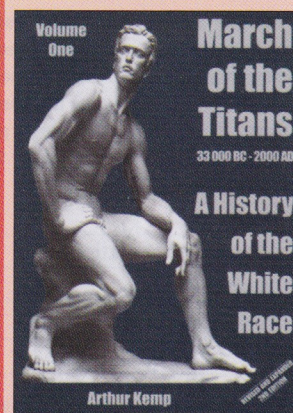

When literature became widely available, many in the population sought to change their status, a growing class of scholars, businessfolk and politicians emerged, something which was in due course to produce profound changes in the way nations were run.

The printing press was to have a liberating influence on the European and British society, providing our race with a means of developing its innate inquisitive nature and bringing about substantial political and cultural change.

Monthly review

MARCH OF THE TITANS

A history of the White Race
reviewed by Paul Golding

Searching through today's British libraries, one would come to think that the white nations of the West were only a recent phenomenon, with the past dominated by the peoples of other continents.

The lack of a history of the White people of the world is now at an end! March of the Titans is the history of a defined race, not of any particular country, its narrative follows several continents and centuries, not limiting itself to any one geographical region.

This is perhaps the first ever complete and profusely illustrated history of the white race. Spanning some 35,000 years of known history, the book traces the progress of the white race from the earliest stirrings of our ancestors at the beginning of the Interglacial period to our first tentative forays into space at the end of the 20th century.

In between are some 350 centuries of breathtaking history, documented in this book in awe-inspiring detail! The incredible triumphs, discoveries, defeats, adventures, setbacks, breakthroughs, disasters and the relentless march of our ancestors across the stage of history are all here.

Written without political bias of any sort, the book tells the truth as it was. A revolutionary book that will change your understanding of history, race, society and civilisation!

March of the Titans will soon be available from Freedom Books and advertised in its catalogue and on the BNP's website.

William Caxton was commemorated in a set of Royal Mail stamps in 1976
